The Grand Jury Fulls to Indict, and the Commission Business is Resumed. The Kings county Grand Jury has falled to bring in an indictment in the case of James McCauley, who was arrested at the recent raid on the pool room at 353 Fulton street.

Brooklyn, of which Charley Johnston was the reputed proprietor. The pool room had been running for more than a week before Police Captain Campbell made his descent. Eleven employees in the place were arrested, but McCauley was the only prisoner held for the Grand Jury by Justice Walsh. Capt. Camp-bell diamantled the place and carried off all the bell diamantled the place and carried off all the books and fixtures to the station. When the failurs of the GrandJury to act was announced yesterday, Judge Moore, in the Court of Sessions, was asked to issue an order for the surrender of the property, and it will be given up just as seen as the necessary affidavits have been submitted.

Ten minutes after the news had spread the pool room was reopened, and it was said it would soon remain open for good. As the McCauley case was regarded as a test, it is altogether likely that three or four other pool rooms will be in full biast in Brooklyn before the close of the week.

I almost fancy that Prince Dadian again offered a prize for my last match against Tschigorin, this time of 1.000 franes, but I am not sure. It is also possible that the money just sent to me is a contribution toward the testimonial presented to me some six months ago."
